Synopsis

A crew has been called in for a Class 1 on their day off and it couldn't be worse timing – Grand Final Day. The rostered crew is working on a "bigger task", already into overtime and all indicators are that this is routine. It is clear the team have some challenges being under resourced and there's plenty of emotion around a game that they're all eager to catch- especially when the Team Leader is hosting the Game Day party. With perceived pressure elements, seniority affecting the team dynamic, and the crew distracted by the game, cutting corners may be a consequence of rushing. Critical conversations ensure the impact of the risk assessments – could they have been more successful on Grand Final Day?

All workshops follow deep research and analysis to provide credible yet challenging scenarios to bring home the lessons learned and the consequences when they are not.

DARIO

No way. C'mon, let's get it done. JSEA.

JAYSON

Done.

DARIO

We're supposed to do it together.

JAYSON

Yeah, it's in the truck on the dash, go and sign it.

DARIO

We've been warned about tick and flick.

JAYSON

F me, you wanna change something on it, change it.

Personally, I want to get this done and get home - preferably before half-time.
